

Press Release

For Immediate Release

February 18, 2011

Marina International Festival of the Winds to Celebrate Its 12th Year

The Marina International Festival of the Winds plans on celebrating its 12th year over Mother's Day Weekend, May 7 and 8, 2011. The Festival will continue to have free admission and lots of wind-related activities and fun for the whole family.

The Festival is a celebration of the wind and features kite flying, hang gliding, a "best trick" skate board competition, wind-related art and science projects, giant kite demonstrations, a kite-making workshop, food, vendor and informational booths, live music and entertainment, and a giant inflatable air park.

The annual two-day event over Mother's Day weekend also provides local businesses and non-profit organizations an opportunity to showcase themselves in a casual family atmosphere as well as creating a fun and educational experience for adults and kids alike.

The Committee is looking for sponsors, vendors and volunteers to get involved and participate in any way they can. For those interested in participating in this year's event, please visit: www.marinafestival.com for the meeting schedule and other information about the Festival.

This Festival is a community-wide free family event.